

Igor Bondar

Andrey Bizyukin

Who
likes divers
under water?

Igor Bondar
Andrey Bizyukin

Who likes divers under water?

A photo story

“Zolotoye sechenie“
private publishers
2 0 1 7

All divers love the sea and underwater creatures. But what kind of marine animals love the divers? The answer to this question is in our humorous photo story.

Photo by Andrey Bizyukin.

“Zolotoye sechenie“ private publishers.

ISBN 978-5-907756-08-3

Copyright © Igor Bondar, 2017

Copyright © Andrey Bizyukin, 2017

Copyright © Design: „Zolotoye sechenie“, 2017

*In this book, we tried to research which of the underwater inhabitants love divers
most of all.*

*In relation to dolphins,
everything is clear and
obvious, but who else?*

Sea seal of course.
They like to make...

...funny faces for divers,

*...and from time to time
they check how securely our fin
straps are fastened.*

*It is not widely known
that divers are also liked by...*

...whale sharks.

*But they are so modest!
That's why they prefer to fill water
into their mouth, and not spill
the beans about it.*

Odd enough, birds also love divers!

*They like to observe us
under water,*

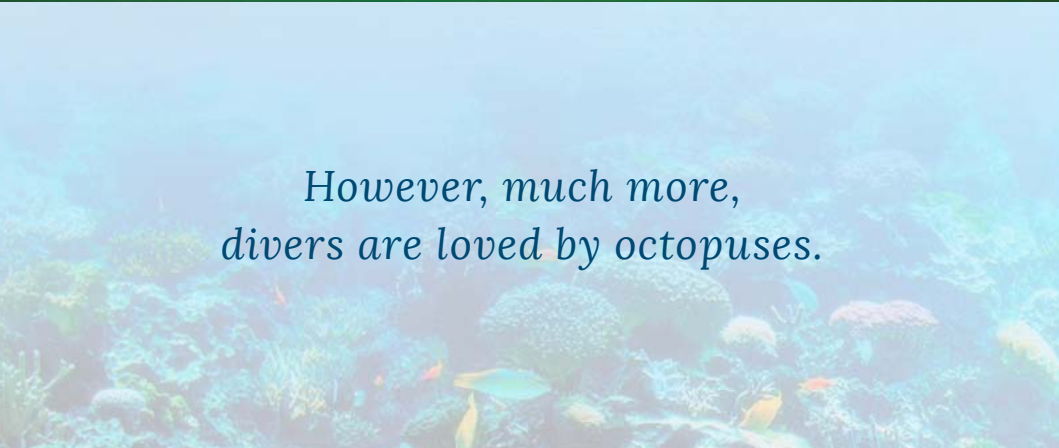

*...and sometimes they even dive
down just to be closer to us.*

*However, much more,
divers are loved by octopuses.*

It is reasonable to ask: Why do we attract them?

It's quite simple really. These animals are very creative and they want to learn from divers; for example...

...how to make underwater photos,

...or how to dance.

Octopuses are very caring. If we look upset they gently stroke our face with their tentacles to soothe us.

When they think we are hungry, they give us tasty
seashells.

*If something gets stuck in our
mouth – they offer their own special toothpicks...*

*...and when it starts raining –
they put up an umbrella
over our head.*

A full-page background image showing a diver in black gear swimming in greenish water. A large, reddish-brown octopus is positioned next to the diver, with its tentacles reaching out. In the background, a dark, smoke-like plume rises from the bottom. The text is overlaid in the bottom right corner.

Unfortunately,
octopuses don't
much worry
about health
and smoke a lot.
That is why their life
is shorter than divers' life.

A large octopus with pinkish-orange tentacles and a yellowish-brown body is swimming underwater. The octopus is positioned in the center of the frame, with its tentacles spread out. A diver is visible in the background, partially obscured by the octopus. The water is a deep green color, and there are some bubbles visible near the octopus's head.

*At the same time,
they are very soulful
and like to converse
in whispers with us
face to face.*

*They also like to take divers
for a ride under water.*

In other words, we always have a good time with these amiable octopuses.

However, octopuses are only in the second place in regard to underwater creatures who love divers the most. So, who is in the first place?

Jellyfish, of course!

Yes! Don't be surprised by this.

They can't tell us about this
or express
their love in
a different
manner,

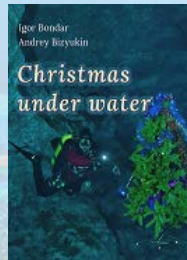

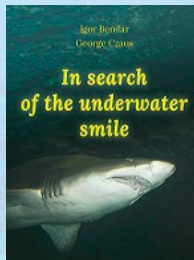

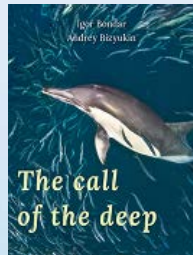

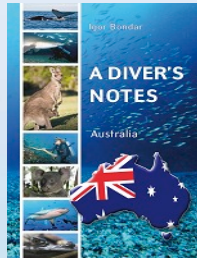

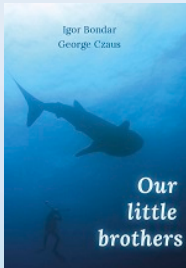

*... that is why they just quietly
swim around admiring us.*

Free download

www.DolphinsDivingDreams.com

Igor Bondar
Andrey Bizyukin

Who likes divers under water?

*All divers love the sea
and underwater creatures.*

But what kind of marine animals love the divers?

The answer on this question is in our humorous photo story.

www.DolphinsDivingDreams.com