Thoughts can be in the head, on paper or sometimes in the pictures

The world today is changing at an incredible rate. Many familiar things from the recent past already seem as old for our children as the Egyptian pyramids .

A person likes to control everything. But, God loves to remind him that this is not the most effective activity, and there are much more important things in our lives.

We all leave our mark behind in this life. If we live in a mediocre way, this mark will always be insignificant, but if we live correctly and morally, the mark will be noticeable and beautiful.

*All soul owners have an explicit or hidden

A green idea is good as long as we are not bringing it to the point of absurdity.

In pursuit of extraordinary photos and short fame, we are often ready to risk damaging quite important things.

Humanity will be as viable as it is able to maintain logic and common sense.

Indeed, everything is incredibly mixed up in the confused world today...

The more technogenic we ourselves become, the more technogenic our creativity becomes.

If people lose important and reliable points of reference in life, they often begin to take very dubious opinions seriously.

No matter how many times humanity bangs its head on various newfangled concepts, it will still have a real way out in only one direction.

Boring people flip a coin to tell their fortune. Lovers pick the petals off the chamomile. Super esthetes - whether the left or the right pelican catch a fish.

Sometimes it takes a lifetime to figure out what is really worth something in this world,

...and what is actually a cheap fake.

Board, sea, sun and breeze – all this is incredibly much for those who have understood something in life.

Living in a familiar reality, we cannot even imagine how much of everything visible and invisible exists around us.

Sad experience for a person is often more useful than success. The healthy realism that results from this is much more valuable than naive self-confidence.

The ability to see everything in a special way is probably funny. However, it is advisable after that not to face reality.

To be honest, there is little that an ordinary person can change in this world. However, he can always choose what to look at in this world.

Peaceful coexistence in abundance is not uncommon. However, peace and goodwill among the people in difficult conditions, are possible only if they have morality.

*Other people's dreams are a very unclear thing.
Sometimes you'll never guess what someone is dreaming about until you see it all yourself...*

It doesn't matter how many times you tell sinners that they will end up in the wrong place, they basically won't believe you still. Well, until they face the facts themselves.

The beauty of our world with millions of its wonderful places proves the beauty of their Creator.

People, by their very nature, often remain children. Only their toys get bigger and more expensive over the years. Those who outgrow earthly toys really grow up.

In recent years, many new spiritual paths in life have been invented. However, if those paths lie far from commandments of the Creator of life, then they will not end happily.

Society may seem pretty homogeneous to us, but it is not. The souls of similar looking people can have very different contents - from light to darkness, from angels to demons.

Curiosity is the engine of many processes on earth. Sometimes good, sometimes not - it depends a lot on what morality the curious are based on.

Harmony in the family is achievable, but it is always the result of efforts on both sides. If efforts come from only one side, real harmony does not appear.

Some part of being is revealed to us in this life, some will inevitably be revealed later. The one who does not forget about it is reasonable. But the one who prepares for it is even smarter.
