Risk always strives towards some goal. Fame, money, power are common human goals. Helping others, fighting for truth and a sense of duty are the high goals of the Creator.

The desire to perpetuate the memory of oneself can be found pretty often. However, understanding how this can be achieved is much less common.

What does a greedy one and a crocodile have in common? It's simple - both the crocodile's jaw and the greedy one's hand work perfectly for clenching, but for unclenching - much worse.

All sorts of evil, lies, passions always try to catch us in this life. Our task is to detect them in time and avoid them.

Many on this Earth like to take interest in things they absolutely do not need.

Our expectations of a relationship and the relationship itself are sometimes very different things. What can be said here – sometimes there is also an abyss between God's expectations from people and reality.

If something is not clear to us in this world, then it will always be more useful to initially look at it optimistically.

Great benefits are often hidden in the interweaving of different cultures, styles and traditions. By sharing the best, humanity inevitably becomes better.

It has been noticed that cats which often surf the Internet, stop catching mice. That is understandable - the reviews of mice there are not so good.

Cultural and moral 'revolutions' of recent years have given rise to many things that are not usual to our eyes.

Sometimes our daily lives have a significant influence on holidays.

When people need God and eternal life, they build churches. When only food becomes important to them, they turn churches into cafes.

Each new meeting creates something that wasn't there before. It is like a new drop into the ocean of reality. But it is the quality of these drops that determines the quality of the entire ocean.

There are two ways to approach a problem – deal with it or hide from it. The result, in principle, is known. But the number of hiding ones is not decreasing...

In different epochs, many things looked different on earth. But the inner questions of a person, the direction of his dreams and desires, have always been more or less the same...

The experience of teachers and mentors is extremely important for people. Without it, everyone begins to explore the world 'from zero', and therefore their chances of really understanding it are also zero.

The percentage of humanity in a human is determined only by his priorities. If they are high and spiritual, then everything is already not as bad.

A thoughtful look at life is very useful. It is impossible to know this world without a serious desire for it.

By moving towards your desires or plans, it is important not to miss more serious things.

It is known that good and beautiful places attract everyone. Paradoxically, for some reason, bad places don't repel everyone.

Life under the control of artificial intelligence can be predicted at the beginning. However, it is impossible to predict it at the end.

Many things in our world - in the world of God - shouldn't be substituted with something virtual. It wouldn't be as good anyway.

The process of cognition in this world doesn't come from just our side, but from other sides as well. If we take this into account, we will always get a more realistic picture.

Everything created or living in this world is always inevitably moves towards its decay. Only the human soul has a chance to move in the opposite direction.

It's great when we sometimes begin to suspect that there are things and categories in the world that are slightly beyond our understanding.

The joy of being is a good "compass" in life. But there are other serious compasses. For example, the joy of being part of something truly important.

*Thoughtful looks may become a rarity on earth.
Indeed, what is there someone to think about if AI knows everything and suggests it at the right moment?*

Attempts to copy various "technologies" from God have always been welcomed by people. But with attempts to copy the moral principles from God, people are much more modest.

Our life is often a competition for who will be the first in us to make a decision: our soul or our passions.
